inklude™ is an attempt to introduce inclusive products in education. It is an attempt to use technology and expertise in areas where there has been less or no development. Many Digital products have inclusive features, especially smartphones but we hardly see inclusion in non-digital tangible products like book, games etc.

inklude™ is a step further in this direction. Our journey begins with inclusion in printed products and shall thereof take this to another level in the world of printing.

Well if you think printed books are only for children who can see, let's introduce you to inklude™ books which can be read by both.

Chanakya Mudrak has played a vital role in developing UDL inclusive study material with NCERT. After spending close to 2 years in R&D, a special Poly-Braille® technique was developed to print Braille & Ink on same sheets of paper making it possible for readers with and without sight to read the same document or book. This will bring the world closer.

Our children with visual impairment will be able to participate in common learning initiatives and could play games along with other sighted children
